KHABAROVSK PARTY GROUPS ELECT LEADERS,
DISCUSS SHORTCOMINGS, CRITICIZE FISH INDUSTRY

KRAY PARTY COMMITTEE HOLDS PLENUM -- Tikhookeanskaya Zvezda, No 161, 10 Jul 49

The recent plenum of the Khabarovsk Kray Committee VKP(b) discussed the progress of the fishing industry in Kamchatka and Nizhne-Amur oblasts and the problem of improving mass political work in enterprises of the city of Komsomol'sk. Reports on the first problem were given by Grachev, secretary of the Kamchatka Oblast Committee VKP(b), Kotelnikov, chief of "Glavkamchatrybprom" (Main Administration of the Kamchatka Fish Industry), Solov'yev, secretary of the Nizhne-Amur Oblast Committee VKP(b), and Sosnovskiy, chief of "Glavnurrysproso" (Main Administration of the Amur Fish Industry).

Speakers in the discussion following the reports spoke of the shortcomings in the work of Party organizations in fishing regions and disclosed the causes for the poor work of fishing enterprises and kolхозes during the past season. Among the speakers were Grushko, deputy chief of the light industry section of the Kray Committee VEP(b); Koshkin, secretary of the Chkotakiy Rayon Committee VEP(b); Gornov, deputy chairman of the Khabarovsk Kray Executive Committee; Sutura, secretary of the Manzykiy Rayon Committee VEP(b); Gusev, secretary of the Kray Committee VEP(b); Afanas'yev, chairman of the Nizhne-Amur Oblast Executive Committee; Gorshkov, chairman of the Kamchatka Oblast Union of Collective Fishermen; Kachan, secretary of the Nizhne-Amur Oblast Committee VEP(b); Ryshkov, deputy chairman of the Kray Executive Committee; Dedkov, chairman of the Kamchatka Oblast Executive Committee; and Alyanichikov, secretary of the Nizhno-Amurskiy Rayon Committee VEP(b).

In his speech, Gusev pointed out that the Kamchatka Oblast Committee VKP(b) has not made a satisfactory distribution of Party forces among fishing enterprises. There are fewer Communists working in the fish industry than in any other organization or enterprise, and only 8 percent of the staff of the Party organization is working directly in the fishing area. The work of the fish industry sections, recently created in the Kray Executive Committee and the Kamchatka Oblast soviets of workers' deputies, has not yet become effective.

50X1-HUM

Yefimov noted that the lag in the fish catch on the Okhotsk coast is the fault primarily of "Glasmuryprom" and the Nizhne-Amur Oblast Committee VKP(b). The Party organizations are not concerned with economic problems, fail to correct deficiencies, do not improve workers' living conditions, and do not give sufficient attention to newly arrived workers.

Romanov, secretary of the Komsomol'sk City Committee VKP(b), gave the main report on the condition of mass political work in Komsomol'sk enterprises. After noting the economic improvement of the city's industry, Romanov stated that Party organizations have done much to increase the technical, cultural, and political level of workers, employees, and intelligentsia. This year, the Party education system trained 7,674 persons, 980 Communists made independent theoretical studies, and more than 11,000 persons in the last year and a half have been trained in courses for foremen and in schools giving minimum technical training. A large part of the worker group, however, is not being reached by political agitation work. This is particularly true of workers in local industry and cooperative enterprises and in trade and auxiliary organizations. The city has 12,000 Communists and Komsomols, publishes six newspapers, and has many other educational and cultural facilities, but is not using them to the best advantage in mass political work.

Among the speakers in the discussion following Romanov's report were Shchepin, deputy chief of the propaganda and agitation section of the Khabarovsk Kray Committee VKP(b); Kul'nevich, secretary of the Khabarovsk City Committee VKP(b); Shatalin, secretary of the Kray Committee VKP(b); Korostelev, secretary of the Stalinskiy Rayon (Komsomol'sk) Committee VKP(b); Sukhinin, secretary of the Kray Committee VKP(b); Yefimov, secretary of the Kray Committee VKP(b); Chernykh, public prosecutor of Khabarovsk Kray; Boyko-Pavlov, deputy chief of a department in the Administration of the Ministry of State Security for Khabarovsk Kray; Satanovskiy; and Vashkovets, chief of the Khabarovsk Kray Trade Department.

The plenum then turned to organizational problems. Mamonov, chairman of the Kray Executive Committee, and Dolgikh, chief of the Kray Administration of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, were removed from membership in the bureau of the Kray Committee VKP(b) in connection with their departure from the kray. Rezhnetnikov, secretary of the Khabarovsk City Committee VKP(b), was removed from the staff of candidates for membership in the bureau of the Kray Committee VKP(b), in connection with his departure for further training. Vorobiyevskiy, former chief of the organization and instruction section of the Kray Committee VKP(b), was removed from the list of candidates for membership in the bureau of the kray committee in connection with his transfer to other work.

The plenum added V. I. Ivanov, chairman of the Kray Executive Committee, and V. S. Tsarev, chief of the Khabarovsk Kray Administration of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, to the staff of members of the bureau of the Kray Committee VKP(b).

CITY PARTY CONFERENCE HELD -- Tikhookeanskaya Zvezda, No 128, 2 Jun 49

The auditing report at the 12th Khabarovsk City Party Conference, held on 28 - 29 May, was presented by Ryabov, secretary of the Khabarovsk City Committee VKP(b). The report stated that in the past year, the city Party organization has achieved some improvement in the level of intra-Party work. Party conferences are held regularly in the great majority of Party organizations. Auditing reports and elections are held at fixed intervals.

The rank-and-file Communist members, however, are not being called upon to participate in conferences in the communications-equipment repair plant, the Amur River Steamship Line, the medical institute, the Kray Council of Trade Unions, and several other enterprises and organizations. Training of young Communists is not progressing satisfactorily. The majority of candidates for the VKP(b) in the city organization have had prolonged probationary periods.

Another serious shortcoming in Party work is the lack of daily control over the execution of decrees and decisions, with the result that many valuable reorganization measures have not been put into effect in some Party organizations. Party organizations have failed completely to give sufficient attention to such institutions as the "Khabarovskugol" Combine, the Amur River Steamship Line, and the Kray "Zagotzerno." This failure has resulted in a separation of Party organizations from the solution of basic operating problems of these institutions.

On the question of work with personnel, Ryabov reported that, in the year since the last conference, 330 persons of the staff of the city Party organization have been promoted to directing Party, soviet, trade union, and economic activity. The caliber of secretaries of primary Party organizations has been improved. Nearly 70 percent have had higher or secondary education.

The city committee has also made progress in Party education work. A total of 12,550 Party members and candidates are taking some phase of Party training. More than 1,000 persons, including 77 secretaries of primary Party organizations, 149 directors of enterprises and institutions, and more than 100 scientific workers, are attending the night University of Marxism-Leninism. In comparison with 1947, the number of students in political schools has increased four times. Not all study groups, however, are being maintained on a high ideological level. Party organizations of the Administration of the Far East Railroad System, the Khabarovsk River Port, the ship-repair plant, and others have not been satisfactorily directing Party education. Due to the lack of daily control by Party organizations, many Communists who are registered for independent study are not fulfilling their programs. Such leaders as Derevyagin, director of the grain-milling combine, Tarnopol'skiy, chief of the railroad station, and Kotov, director of the "Glavtorchermet" (Main Administration of Ferrous Metal Scrap), have not improved their ideological level.

The report treated at length the problem of selecting and training propagandists. The city Party organization has 737 propagandists, 80 percent of whom have had higher or secondary school education and from 3 to 6 years of experience as propagandists. Party seminars for propagandists have been of considerable aid, but must be further improved. Administration of political agitation work has been substantially improved. The staff of agitators has been reviewed again. The best-trained Communists and non-Party personnel have been drawn into agitation work. This work, however, must be improved and extended further within the workers' living area.

The city committee has permitted a number of serious shortcomings in its work with city educational institutions. In particular, the committee has not suppressed the cosmopolitan tendencies in the pedagogical institute. Pavlenko, head of the Institute of Railroad Transport Engineers, has entrusted the direction of the seminar in Marxism-Leninism to a non-Party instructor, with the permission of the city committee, which has overlooked other serious errors in the institute's activities. The city committee must strengthen its leadership over educational institutions to do away completely with all evidences of alien thought.

In the subsequent discussion, Romanov, secretary of the City Committee VLKSM, reported that conditions in the political and general educational training of youths are unsatisfactory. More than 1,000 of the city's Komsomols are not taking any political training. The schools for young workers have lost 600 students who have stopped attending.
